

Camp Lejeune, Jacksonville	Major Marine Corps training base—infantry, armor, artillery, and air defense. Amphibious operations a key training mission.
Lake Lure Army Air Force Redistribution Rest Camp	Rest camp for returning combat crews.
Camp Mackall, Hoffman	Airborne training center for parachute and glider troops.
Manteo Naval Air Station	Carrier fighter aircraft training base.
Morehead City Naval Station	Coordinated ship repair, sailing schedules, anti-submarine defense, and salvage.
Morris Army Air Field, Charlotte	Air defense and aircraft maintenance base.
Ocracoke Naval Station	Anti-submarine patrol base.
Pope Army Air Field, Spring Lake	Adjacent to Fort Bragg. Troop carrier, glider, and fighter base.
Raleigh-Durham Army Air Field	Air defense base.
Southport Naval Station	Conducted ship repairs, sailing schedules, anti-submarine defense, and salvage.
Camp Sutton, Monroe	Army combat engineer training base.

from North Carolina during World War II on Home Front and Battle Front, 1941–1945 by Dr. John Duvall (Fayetteville: The World War II 50th Anniversary Commemorative Committee of the Airborne and Special Operations Museum Foundation, 1996, pp. 67-68).

WWII Military Installations in North Carolina

NAME	MISSION
Asheville Convalescent Center	Important medical facility for wounded seamen.
Basic Training Center #10, Greensboro	Army Air Force training base; renamed the Eastern Overseas Replacement Depot in 1944.
Bluethenthal Army Air Field, Wilmington	Army Air Force fighter interceptor base; anti-submarine patrols also flown from the base.
Fort Bragg, Fayetteville	Established in 1918 as the Army's principal artillery training post. Field Artillery Replacement Training Center a major World War II mission; beginning in the spring of 1942, Bragg became a focus of Airborne (parachute/glider) training. Largest army post in America during World War II.
Camp Butner	Infantry training center. 78 th Infantry Division and other units trained at Butner.
Charlotte Quartermaster Depot	U.S. Army logistics center; Ford Motor Company operated a facility at the depot for the army.
Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Base, Havelock	Major aviation training and maintenance facility for fighter and bomber aircraft. Outlying fields operated at Atlantic, Bogue Sound, New River, New Bern, Edenton, Washington, Greenville, Pollocksville, and Kinston.
Camp Davis, Holly Ridge	U.S. Army's principal anti-aircraft artillery training facility. Major firing range operated at Fort Fisher, 50 miles south.
Elizabeth City Coast Guard Station	Major aviation maintenance and training facility. Search and rescue and anti-submarine patrols major mission.
Elizabeth City Naval Air Station	Aviation training and maintenance base. Operated by long-range anti-submarine patrol using bombers and "blimps"—lighter-than-air craft.
Seymour Johnson Army Air Field, Goldsboro	Aircraft maintenance and aircraft gunnery training base.
Knollwood Army Air Field, Pinhurst	Army Air Force communications training base.
Laurinburg-Maxton Army Air Field	Troop carrier and glider training base.